WORKS IN PROGRESS:

I. Book

The University as Sacred Canopy: Constituting the Global Knowledge Society (with J. W. Meyer). An examination of the worldwide explosion in university curricula and enrollments 1900 to the present, arguing that both trends represent globalization-fueled extensions of core Modern cultural assumptions: that nature operates according to universalistic, integrated, and rational rules and that humans can discover, know, and learn how to use such rules through rational endeavors. Explored with longitudinal and comparative data from university course catalogs, directories, and yearbooks.

II. Articles & Chapters

“NGOs, INGOs, and Social Change: Environmental Policy Reform in the Developing World, 1970-1995” (with Wes Longhofer and Evan Schofer). Paper presented at the American Sociological Association.

“Cross-National Variations in the Criminal Regulation of Sex, 1965 to 2005.”

“Higher Education and Quality of Life” (with Karen J. Robinson).
